ANTHOLOGY OF MODERN & CONTEMPORARY

American Poetry
Editorial Advisory Board

BART BRINKMAN (Framingham State University)
EDWARD BRUNNER (Southern Illinois University)
OKLA ELIOT (University of Illinois at Urbana–Champaign)
CHASE DIMOCK (University of Illinois at Urbana–Champaign)
KAREN FORD (University of Oregon)
MELISSA GIRARD (Loyola University Maryland)
WALTER KALAIJDJIAN (Emory University)
ROBERT PARKER (University of Illinois at Urbana–Champaign)
MICHAEL THURSTON (Smith College)
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Topical Contents</th>
<th>xxix</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Preface</td>
<td>xxxv</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Acknowledgments</td>
<td>00</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Mary Cornelia Hartshorne (born c. 1910)</th>
<th>1</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Fallen Leaves</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hills of Doon</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Wind in Mexico</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Charles Henri Ford (1913–2002)</th>
<th>5</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Plaint</td>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Pastoral for Pavlik</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Flag of Ecstasy</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Charles Olson (1910–1970)</th>
<th>9</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Variations Done for Gerald Van De Wiele</td>
<td>9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Maximus, to Himself</td>
<td>13</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cole’s Island</td>
<td>14</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Elizabeth Bishop (1911–1979)</th>
<th>17</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>The Fish</td>
<td>17</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Man-Moth</td>
<td>19</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>At the Fishhouses</td>
<td>20</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Filling Station</td>
<td>22</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Questions of Travel</td>
<td>24</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Armadillo</td>
<td>25</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>In the Waiting Room</td>
<td>27</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Pink Dog</td>
<td>29</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Crusoe in England</td>
<td>31</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>One Art</td>
<td>35</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>William Everson (1912–1994)</th>
<th>36</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>The Making of the Cross</td>
<td>36</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A Canticle to the Waterbirds</td>
<td>37</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
TILLIE LERNER OLSEN (1912–2007) 41
I Want You Women Up North to Know 41

ROBERT HAYDEN (1913–1980) 45
Middle Passage 45
Runagate Runagate 51
A Letter from Phillis Wheatley 54
Those Winter Sundays 55
Night, Death, Mississippi 56
Aunt Jemima of the Ocean Waves 57 from Elegies for Paradise Valley:
   No. 1 60
The Dogwood Trees 60
O Daedalus, Fly Away Home 60

WELDON KEEES (1914–1955) 62
June 1940 62
Travels in North America 63

RANDALL JARRELL (1914–1965) 67
The Death of the Ball Turret Gunner 67
A Front 67
Second Air Force 69
Protocols 70

JAPANESE AMERICAN CONCENTRATION CAMP HAIKU, 1942–1944 72
Shiho Okamoto (Being arrested—) 73
Sadayo Taniguchi (Hand-cuffed and taken away) 73
Kyotaro Komuro (Lingering summer heat—) 73
Taro Katay (Shouldering) 73
Komuro (Passed guard tower) 73
Okamoto (In the shade of summer sun) 73
Shonan Suzuki (Withered grass on ground) 73
Hakuro Wada (Young grass red and shriveled) 73
Hyakuissei Okamoto (Dandelion has bloomed) 73
Shizuku Uyemaruko (On certain days) 74
Wada (Released seagull) 74
Ryokuin Matsui (Sprinkling water outside) 74
Komuro (Want to be with children) 74
Wada (Even the croaking of frogs) 74
Hangetsu Tsunekawa (Sentry at main gate) 74
Shokoshi Saga (Thin shadow of tule reed) 74
Tokuji Hirai (Looking at summer moon) 74
Suzuki (Moon shadows on internment camp) 74
Hirai (Early moon has set) 74
Suiko Matsushita (Rain shower from mountain) 74
Kyokusui (Thorns of the iron fence) 75
Neiji Ozawa (Desert rain falling) 75
Senbinshi Takaoka (Frosty morning) 75
Oshio (Stepping through snow) 75
Jyosha Yamada (Black clouds instantly shroud) 75
Takaoka (Winter wind) 75
Hekisamei Matsuda (Doll without a head) 75
Sei Sagara (Suddenly awakened) 75
Hyakuisei Okamoto (Jeep patrolling slowly) 75
Shizuku Uyemaruko (Grieving within) 75
Okamoto (In the sage brush) 76
Matsushita (Oh shells—) 76

JOHN BERRYMAN (1914–1972)

from The Dream Songs:

1  Huffy Henry 77
4  Filling her compact & delicious body 78
5  Henry sats 78
14  Life, friends 79
22  Of 1826 80
29  There sat down, once 80
40  I’m scared a lonely 81
45  He stared at ruin 81
46  I am, outside 82
55  Peter’s not friendly 83
76  Henry’s Confession 83
382  At Henry’s bier 84
384  The marker slants 84

WILLIAM STAFFORD (1914–1993)

Traveling Through the Dark 86
At the Bomb Testing Site 86
At the Un-national Monument along the Canadian Border 87
The Indian Cave Jerry Ramsey Found 87

DUDLEY RANDALL (b. 1914)

Ballad of Birmingham 88
A Different Image 89
JOY DAVIDMAN (1915–1960)
This Woman 90
For The Nazis 90

MARGARET WALKER (1915–1998)
For My People 92

RUTH STONE (1915–2011)
In an Iridescent Time 94
I Have Three Daughters 94
Pokeberries 95
American Milk 96
From the Arboretum 96
Drought in the Lower Fields 97
Some Things You’ll Need to Know Before You Join the Union 97

THOMAS McGRATH (1916–1990)
Deep South 100
Crash Report 101
First Book of Genesis According to the Diplomats 102
Ars Poetica: Or: Who Lives in the Ivory Tower? 104
A Little Song About Charity 105
Against the False Magicians 106
After the Beat Generation 107
Ode for the American Dead in Asia 108
Poem at the Winter Solstice 109

ROBERT LOWELL (1917–1977)
Inauguration Day: January 1953 111
A Mad Negro Soldier Confined at Munich 112
Commander Lowell 113
“To Speak of Woe That Is in Marriage” 115
Man and Wife 116
Memories of West Street and Lepke 117
Skunk Hour 118
For the Union Dead 120
The Mouth of the Hudson 122
July in Washington 123
The March I 124
The March II 124
Central Park 125
Epilogue 126
GWENDOLYN BROOKS (1917–2000) 128
A Song in the Front Yard 128
Of De Witt Williams on his way to Lincoln Cemetery 129
Gay Chaps at the Bar 130
We Real Cool 135
The Ballad of Rudolph Reed 135
The Blackstone Rangers 137
Malcolm X 139
Young Afrikans 140
The Boy Died in My Alley 141
To Those of My Sisters Who Kept Their Naturals 142
To the Diaspora 143

WILLIAM BRONK (1918–1999) 146
At Tikal 146
The Mayan Glyphs Unread 147
I Thought It Was Harry 147
Where It Ends 148
Left Alone 148

ROBERT DUNCAN (1919–1988) 149
Often I Am Permitted to Return to a Meadow 149
My Mother Would Be a Falconress 150
The Torso (Passages 18) 152
Up Rising (Passages 25) 154

BARBARA GUEST (1920–2006) 157
from Quilts: 157
“Couch of Space” 157
Words 158
Twilight Polka Dots 158

AARON KRAMER (1921–1997) 160
Denmark Vesey 161

RICHARD WILBUR (b. 1921) 181
The Pardon 181
A Baroque Wall-Fountain in the Villa Sciarra 182
Beasts 184
Love Calls Us to the Things of This World 185
Advice to a Prophet 186
Children of Darkness 187
CONTENTS

MONA VAN DUYN (1921–2004)
- Toward a Definition of Marriage 189

JACK KEROUAC (1922–1969)
- The Perfect Love of Mind Essence:- 192
- Haiku 193

JAMES DICKEY (1923–1997)
- The Sheep Child 195
- Falling 197

DENISE LEVERTOV (1923–1997)
- The Ache of Marriage 203
- Olga Poems 204
- What Were They Like? 209
- Life at War 210

ANTHONY HECHT (1923–2004)
- A Hill 212
- “More Light! More Light!” 213
- The Book of Yolek 214

BOB KAUFMAN (1925–1986)
- The Biggest Fisherman 216
- Crootey Songo 217
- No More Jazz at Alacatraz 217
- from Jail Poems, Nos. 1–3 218

MAXINE KUMIN (b. 1925)
- Voices from Kansas 219
- Saga 220
- Oblivion 222
- Pantoum, with Swan 222
- With William Meredith in Bulgaria 223

DONALD JUSTICE (1925–2004)
- An Old-Fashioned Devil 225
- The Wall 225
- Early Poems 226
- Presences 226
- Absences 227
PAUL BLACKBURN (1926–1971)
  At the Crossroad
  At the Well

FRANK O’HARA (1926–1966)
  From Alma
  Poem (The eager note on my door)
  A Step Away from Them
  The Day Lady Died
  Why I Am Not a Painter
  A True Account of Talking to the Sun at Fire Island
  On Seeing Larry Rivers’ Washington Crossing the Delaware at the Museum of Modern Art
  Thinking of James Dean

JAMES MERRILL (1926–1995)
  An Urban Convalescence
  The Broken Home
  Willowware Cup
  Lost in Translation

ALLEN GINSBERG (1926–1997)
  Love Poem on Theme by Whitman Howl
  A Supermarket in California
  Who Be Kind To
  Rain-wet asphalt heat, garbage curbed cans overflowing
  Father Death Blues
  Sphincter

ROBERT CREELEY (1926–2005)
  After Lorca
  I Know a Man
  The Flower
  For Love America Age

ROBERT BLY (b. 1926)
  Counting Small-Boned Bodies
  Hearing Gary Snyder Read
A. R. AMMONS (1926–2001) 283
Corsons Inlet 283
Gravelly Run 286
Coon Song 287

JAMES WRIGHT (1927–1980) 290
Saint Judas 290
Beginning 290
Autumn Begins in Martins Ferry, Ohio 291
Lying in a Hammock at William Duffy’s Farm in Pine Island, Minnesota 291
A Blessing 292
A Centenary Ode: Inscribed to Little Crow, Leader of the Sioux Rebellion in Minnesota, 1862 292

JOHN ASHBERY (b. 1927) 294
“They Dream Only of America” 294
Farm Implements and Rutabagas in a Landscape 295
Mixed Feelings 296
Street Musicians 297
Syringa 298
Daffy Duck in Hollywood 300
Paradoxes and Oxymorons 304
The Problem of Anxiety 305
Dull Mauve 305
A Kind of Chill 306
Spooks Run Wild 306
Marine Shadow 307
Words to That Effect 307

GALWAY KINNELL (b. 1927) 309
The Porcupine 309
The Bear 312
The Vow 315

W. S. MERWIN (b. 1927) 316
The Drunk in the Furnace 316
It Is March 317
Caesar 318
The Room 318
December Among the Vanished 318
For the Anniversary of My Death 319
When The War Is Over 319
The Asians Dying 319
For a Coming Extinction 320
Looking for Mushrooms at Sunrise 321
The Gardens of Zuñi 322
Beginning 322
The Horse 323
Sun and Rain 323
Berryman 324
Daylight 325
The Name of the Air 325
Far Along in the Story 326
Worn Words 326

ANNE SEXTON (1928–1974) 327
Her Kind 327
The Truth the Dead Know 328
And One for My Dame 328
Jesus Asleep 330
Jesus Raises Up the Harlot 331
The Room of My Life 331

PHILIP LEVINE (b. 1928) 333
For Fran 333
The Horse 334
Animals Are Passing from Our Lives 335
Belle Isle, 1949 335
They Feed They Lion 336
Francisco, I’ll Bring You Red Carnations 337
Fear and Fame 340
On the Meeting of García Lorca and Hart Crane 341

ADRIENNE RICH (1929–2012) 343
Aunt Jennifer’s Tigers 343
From Shooting Script 344
Trying to Talk with a Man 351
Diving into the Wreck 353
Twenty-One Love Poems 355
Power 365

from An Atlas of the Difficult World:
XIII. (Dedications) I know you are reading this poem 365
Behind the Motel 366
Hotel 367

DEREK WALCOTT (b. 1930) 368
A Far Cry from Africa 368
Laventille 369
The Fortunate Traveller 372 from Omeros
   Book One, Chapter 1 379

GARY SNYDER (b. 1930) 382
Riprap 382
Beneath My Hand and Eye the Distant Hills. Your Body 383
I Went into the Maverick Bar 384
Straight-Creek—Great Burn 385
Axe Handles 386

GREGORY CORSO (1930–2001) 388
Marriage 388
Bomb 391

ETHERIDGE KNIGHT (1931–1991) 397
Haiku 1, 4, 9 397
Hard Rock Returns to Prison from the Hospital for the Criminal Insane 397
The Idea of Ancestry 399
A Poem for Myself 400
For Malcolm, a Year After 401
Television Speaks 401
For Black Poets Who Think of Suicide 401

SYLVIA PLATH (1932–1963) 403
The Colossus 404
The Bee Meeting 405
The Arrival of the Bee Box 407
Stings 408
The Swarm 409
Wintering 411
Daddy 413
Ariel 415
Lady Lazarus 416
HENRY DUMAS (1934–1968)

Son of Msippi 420
Kef 24 421
Kef 16 422
Fish 423
Knees of a Natural Man 423
Low Down Dog Blues 424
Black Star Line 424
Peas 426
Yams 426

AMIRI BARAKA (LEROI JONES) (b. 1934)

SOS 427
Black Art 427
When We’ll Worship Jesus 429

N. SCOTT MOMADAY (b. 1934)

Plainview: 3 433
Buteo Regalis 433
Crows in a Winter Composition 434
Carriers of the Dream Wheel 434
Rings of Bone 435
The Stalker 435
from The Colors of Night:
Purple 435
The Burning 436
December 29, 1890 436
The Shield That Came Back 437
The Snow Mare 438
To an Aged Bear 438
A Benign Self-Portrait 438

MARK STRAND (b. 1934)

The Prediction 441
Where Are the Waters of Childhood? 441

AUDRE LORDE (1934–1992)

From Coal 443
Sisters in Arms 444
Outlines 445
Call 450
KATHLEEN FRASER (b. 1935) 453
   In Commemoration of the Visit of Foreign Commercial Representatives to Japan, 1947 453

CHARLES WRIGHT (b. 1935) 458
   Spider Crystal Ascension 458
   Clear Night 458
   Homage to Paul Cézanne 459

MARY OLIVER (b. 1935) 464
   The Morning Walk 464
   At Great Pond 464
   Black Snake This Time 465

JAYNE CORTEZ (1936–2012) 467
   I Am New York City 467
   Do You Think 468

LUCILLE CLIFTON (1936–2010) 470
   I Am Accused of Tending to the Past 470
   At the Cemetery, Walnut Grove Plantation, South Carolina, 1989 471
   Reply 472
   The Message of Crazy Horse 472
   Poem to My Uterus 473
   To My Last Period 474
   Brothers 474

SUSAN HOWE (b. 1937) 478
   from Articulation of Sound Forms in Time:
   The Falls Fight 478
   Hope Atherton’s Wanderings 480

MICHAEL S. HARPER (b. 1938) 486
   Song: I Want a Witness 486
   Blue Ruth: America 487
   Brother John 487
   American History 489
   We Assume: On the Death of Our Son, Reuben Masai Harper 489
   Reuben, Reuben 490
   Deathwatch 490
   Dear John, Dear Coltrane 492
ISHMAEL REED (b. 1938)
I Am a Cowboy in the boat of Ra 494
Oakland Blues 497

LAWSON FUSAO INADA (b. 1938)
Listening Images 498

ROBERT PINSKY (b. 1940)
Dying 502
The Unseen 503
Shirt 504
Veni, Creator Spiritus 506

WELTON SMITH (1940–2006)
Malcolm 508

WILLIAM HEYEN (b. 1940)
Riddle 515
from Crazy Horse in Stillness:
Forces 516
White & Gold 516
One World 517
Bone & Velvet 517
Mother 517
The Count 517
Surveyors 518
Rot 518
V 518
Resolve, 1876 518
Treaty 519
Snowbirds 519
The Slowing 519
The Paper It’s Written On 519
The Tooth 520
Wakan Tanka 520
Disequilibrium 520
Eclipse 520

JUDY GRAHN (b. 1940)
I Have Come to Claim Marilyn Monroe's Body 521
Vietnamese Woman Speaking to an American Soldier 522 Carol
Plainsong
The Woman Whose Head Is on Fire

CAROLYN M. RODGERS (1941–2010)
How I Got Ovah
And When the Revolution Came Mama’s God

ROBERT HASS (b. 1941)
Rusia En 1931
A Story About the Body
Forty Something Sonnet

LYN HEJINIAN (b. 1941)
from My Life:
A pause, A Rose, Something on Paper
from The Distance:
Nos. III, XIX, XXIV, XXX, XXXII, XXXVII

SHARON OLDS (b. 1942)
The Pope’s Penis
Ideographs
Photograph of the Girl
Things That Are Worse Than Death
The Waiting
His Father’s Cadaver
Known to Be Left Left-Wife Goose

LOUISE GLÜCK (b. 1943)
The Drowned Children
Vespers (You thought we didn’t know)
Vespers (More than you love me, very possibly)
The Wild Iris
from Meadowlands:
Penelope’s Song
Quiet Evening
Parable of the King
Parable of the Hostages
CONTEMPORARY AMERICAN POETRY

Circe’s Power 553
Circe’s Grief 554
Reunion 554
Telemachus Burden 555
Before the Storm 555
A Village Life 556

MICHAEL PALMER (b. 1943) 559
Song of the Round Man 559
All Those Words 560
I Have Answers to All of Your Questions 560
Fifth Prose 561
Autobiography 562

PAUL VIOLI (1944–2011) 564
Index 564
Tanka 565
A Movable Snack 565

THOMAS JAMES (1946–1974) 567
Mummy of a Lady Named Jemutesonekh XXI Dynasty 567
Dissecting a Pig 568

RON SILLIMAN (b. 1946) 571
from Ketjak 571
from Sunset Debris 573
The Chinese Notebook 575
from Toner 594

ADRIAN C. LOUIS (b. 1946) 599
Dust World 599
Wakinyan 601
Without Words 602
Coyote Night 603
How Verdell and Dr. Zhivago Disassembled the Soviet Union 604
Wanbli Gleska Win 605
Looking for Judas 605
A Colossal American Copulation 606
Petroglyphs of Serena 609
Jesus Finds His Ghost Shirt 617
YUSEF KOMUNYAKAA (b. 1947)                       618
   Tu Do Street                                  618
   Prisoners                                    619
   Communiqué                                   621
   The Dog Act                                   622
   The Nazi Doll                                 622
   Fog Galleon                                   623
   Work                                          624

Ai (1947–2010)                                   626
   The Root Eater                                626
   Twenty-Year Marriage                         627
   The German Army, Russia, 1943                 627
   The Testimony of J. Robert Oppenheimer        628

WENDY ROSE (b. 1948)                             631
   Truganiny                                     631

TIMOTHY STEELE (b. 1948)                         633
   Daybreak, Benedict Canyon                     633
   April 27, 1937                                634

ALBERT GOLDBARTH (b. 1948)                       636
   Swan                                         636
   Coinages: A Fairy Tale                       636
   1400                                          638

C. D. WRIGHT (b. 1949)                           640
   Obedience of the Corpse                       640 from Just Whistle:                            641
      THE BODY, ALIVE, NOT DEAD BUT DORMANT      641
      BECAUSE CONDITIONS ARE IDEAL               641
         FOR CROWING                              641
      AND NOTHING                                641
      THE CORPSE WAS IN THE BED                  642
      ON THE MORN OF                             642
      A PARTITION SEPARATES IT FROM              642
         OTHER BODIES                             642
         OVER EVERYTHING                         642
      Song of the Gourd                         643 from Cooling Time:                           643
      Only the Crossing Counts                  643
Until Words Turn to Moss. 644
What Would Oppen Say, 644
DEAR DYING TOWN 645

JESSICA HAGEDORN (b. 1949) 646
Ming the Merciless 646

CHARLES BERNSTEIN (b. 1950) 648
You 648
from Foreign Body Sensation 648
The Kiwi Bird in the Kiwi Tree 649
Riddle of the Fat Faced Man 650
The Boy Soprano 650

JORIE GRAHAM (b. 1950) 651
History 651
From the New World 652

RAY A. YOUNG BEAR (b. 1950) 656
In Viewpoint: Poem for 14 Catfish and the Town of Tama,
Iowa 656
It is the Fish-Faced Boy Who Struggles 659

CAROLYN FORCHÉ (b. 1950) 663
The Colonel 663
The Museum of Stones 663
The Lightkeeper 664
Morning on the Island 665

ANDREW HUDGINS (b. 1951) 666
At Chancellorsville: The Battle of the Wilderness 666
The Summer of the Drought 667
He Imagines His Wife Dead 667

GARRETT KAORU HONGO (b. 1951) 669
Ancestral Graves, Kahuku 669
Kubota to Miguel Hernández in Heaven, Leupp, Arizona, 1942 672

RITA DOVE (b. 1952) 674
Parsley 674
Receiving the Stigmata 676
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Author</th>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Pages</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>JIMMY SANTIAGO BACA</td>
<td>1952</td>
<td>678</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mi Tío Baca El Poeta De Socorro</td>
<td></td>
<td>678</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Painters</td>
<td></td>
<td>680</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ALBERTO RÍOS</td>
<td>1952</td>
<td>682</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Madre Sofía</td>
<td></td>
<td>682</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>What Happened to Me</td>
<td></td>
<td>683</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ANITA ENDREZZE</td>
<td>1952</td>
<td>685</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Return of the Wolves</td>
<td></td>
<td>685</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Birdwatching at Fan Lake</td>
<td></td>
<td>686</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>La Morena and Her Beehive Hairdo</td>
<td></td>
<td>687</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ANA CASTILLO</td>
<td>1953</td>
<td>689</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Seduced by Natassja Kinski</td>
<td></td>
<td>689</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hummingbird Heart</td>
<td></td>
<td>690</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>MARK DOTY</td>
<td>1953</td>
<td>691</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Homo Will Not Inherit</td>
<td></td>
<td>691</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Embrace</td>
<td></td>
<td>694</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>HARRYETTE MULLEN</td>
<td>1953</td>
<td>696</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>from Trimmings</td>
<td></td>
<td>696</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>from SPeRMKT</td>
<td></td>
<td>696</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>LOUISE ERDRICH</td>
<td>1954</td>
<td>698</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Indian Boarding School: The Runaways</td>
<td></td>
<td>698</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dear John Wayne</td>
<td></td>
<td>699</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Fence</td>
<td></td>
<td>700</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>LORNA DEE CERVANTES</td>
<td>1954</td>
<td>702</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Refugee Ship</td>
<td></td>
<td>702</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Poema para los Californios Muertos</td>
<td></td>
<td>702</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Starfish</td>
<td></td>
<td>704</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>SANDRA CISNEROS</td>
<td>1954</td>
<td>705</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Little Clown, My Heart</td>
<td></td>
<td>705</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>THYLIAS MOSS</td>
<td>1954</td>
<td>706</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fullness</td>
<td></td>
<td>706</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>There Will Be Animals</td>
<td></td>
<td>706</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Lynching</td>
<td></td>
<td>707</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Interpretation of a Poem by Frost Ambition Crystals

PATRICIA SMITH (b. 1955)
Blond White Women Skinhead from Blood Dazzler: from Tankas
(Never has there been)
(Do, they said. Go. Go.)
Man on the TV Say
Company’s Coming
Voodoo II: Money
Voodoo V: Enemy Be Gone from What to Tweak
(Stifle the stinking, shut down the cameras)
Back Home
Motown Crown

MARILYN CHIN (b. 1955)
How I Got That Name Altar

JANICE N. HARRINGTON (b. 1956)
Falling
If She Had Lived

SESSHU FOSTER (b. 1957)
We’re caffeinated by rain inside concrete underpasses
You’ll be fucked up
Look and look again, will he glance up all of a sudden
I’m always grateful no one hears this terrible racket
The Japanese man would not appear riding a horse
Life Magazine, December, 1941
I try to pee but I can’t Game 83

LI-YOUNG LEE (b. 1957)
Persimmons
Little Father
MARTÍN ESPADA (b. 1957)  744
Bully  744
Revolutionary Spanish Lesson  745
Niggerlips  745
The New Bathroom Policy at English High School  746
Federico’s Ghost  747
The Saint Vincent de Paul Food Pantry Stomp  748
Fidel in Ohio  748
Imagine the Angels of Bread  749
Blues for the Soldiers Who Told You  750
The Trouble Ball  751
Hard-Handed Men of Athens  753
The Right Foot of Juan de Oñate  755

ATSURO RILEY (b. 1960)  757
from Romey’s Order:
Picture  757
Skillet  757
Bell  758
Roses  758

CLAUDIA RANKINE (b. 1963)  759
from Don’t Let Me Be Lonely: An American Lyric:
pp. 7, 23, 47–48, 71, 82–83, 113  759

D. A. POWELL (b. 1963)  762
[the cocktail hour finally arrives: whether ending a day at the office]  763
[dogs and boys can treat you like trash. and dogs do love trash]  763 [came a voice in my gullet: rise up and feast. thunderous]  765

HEID E. ERDRICH (b. 1963)  766
True Myth  766
The Theft Outright  767
Some Elsie  767

NATASHA TRETHEWEY (b. 1966)  769
Native Guard  769
Providence  773
Believer 774
Liturgy 775

SHERN ALEXIE (b. 1966) 777
Indian Boy Love Song (#2) 777 from The Native American Broadcasting System: 778
Evolution 778
Scalp Dance by Spokane Indians 779
How to Write the Great American Indian Novel 780
Tourists 782

RICHARD SIKEN (b. 1967) 785
Visible World 785
A Primer for the Small Weird Loves 785

Graphic Interpretations

CHARLES HENRI FORD 790
Serenade to Leonor 28 792

GWENDOLYN BROOKS 793
We Real Cool

ALLEN GINSBERG 794
Kraj Majales
Moloch 795
Consulting I Ching Smoking Pot Listening to the Fugs Sing
Blake 796

WILLIAM EVerson 797
A Canticle to the Waterbirds

DAVID IGNATOW 798
The Form Falls in on Itself

W. S. MERWIN 799
When The War Is Over
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>CONTENTS</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>GARY SNYDER</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>O Mother Gaia</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>RICHARD WILBUR</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A Difference</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>About the Editor</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Index of Poem Titles</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Index of Poets</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Topical Contents

The list of poets under several of the headings identifies writers whose work broadly fits that category. I also list individual poems when the selection here may not show a comprehensive commitment to that topic. To give people maximum flexibility and room for invention, I have left the categories very broad, but many more specific grouping are possible. One might, for example, compare Walt Whittman’s, Allen Tate’s, Robert Lowell’s, Natasha Trethewey’s, and Andrew Hudgins’s poems about the Civil War, or Natasha Trethewey’s, and Patricia Smith’s poems about Hurricane Katrina.

This anthology has been compiled at the intersection of aesthetics and history. By “history” I refer not only to literary history but also broadly to national and international history and to current events. Whether responding to the long traumatic story of race relations in the United States, to the devastating record of World War I trench warfare in France, to the unassimilable reality of the Holocaust, or to historically emergent forms of cultural and sexual practice and identity, American poets have been compelling witnesses. Their poetry responds with unique linguistic compression and metaphoric density to both national experience and international events.

The forms of historical testimony and intervention possible in poetry are consistently distinctive and sometimes incomparable. Lived time without these poems, this collection aims to prove, is impoverished time. I offer that claim in keeping with William Carlos Williams’s observation that people die every day for lack of the knowledge available in poems. But poetic witness, at its best, as readers will find, is not designed to offer ready consolation or to make life easier. Unforgettable witness can make life at once richer and more difficult. Too many other anthologies slight the difference poetry can make in historical understanding. As a result, they deny readers the full epistemological, psychological, and aesthetic resources poetry continues to provide. My goal is thus partly corrective.

Yet, to warrant rereading decade after decade poems must meet high aesthetic standards, though no comprehensive anthology of modern and contemporary poetry can do its job by hewing to only one set of aesthetic criteria. An anthologist’s job, I believe, is to combine flexible taste with sound editorial principles. The astonishing and endlessly energetic diversity of American poetry throughout much of its history is one of its strengths, but diversity alone is not a virtue in an anthology. At least for me, all these poems merit our admiration based on their quality, though the terms on which they do so vary. The canon reform movement of the 1970s and 1980s taught us to value and find pleasure in the immensely varied interplay of tradition and innovation that continues to surprise readers of American poetry to the present day. It also made us realize that aesthetic impulses can be local, embedded in particular historical and literary contexts. The challenge is to find the poems from those contexts that manage at once to honor their historical moment and speak to our own.

These are ambitious aims. Underlying them, however, is a conviction that American poetry represents a major contribution to human culture. Proving all this, of course, depends on making hundreds of individual choices about what poems to include. Sometimes I try to represent a poet’s whole career. From Emily Dickinson, Amy Lowell, Robert Frost, Wallace Stevens, and William Carlos Williams to Gwendolyn Brooks, John Ashbery, and W. S. Merwin I offer what I hope are sufficiently generous selections to give a fair picture of those poets’ accomplishments over time. At other times, I felt a particular period in a career—or even a single long poem or poem sequence—to be so compelling that readers would be best served by concentrating on it. The obvious consensual example is Sylvia Plath’s 1963 Ariel poems. But there are many more instances here—from Randall Jarrell’s World War II poems to the fusion of autobiography and history that Michael Harper achieved in the 1970s. I give maximum space to these major achievements at the expense of other fine poems throughout such poets’ careers.

The most extreme choices, however, are the cases in which I devote all or most of a poet’s space to a single text—from Gertrude Stein’s “Patriarchal Poetry,” Edna St. Vincent Millay’s “Sonnets from an Ungrafted Tree,” Melvin Tolson’s “Libretto for the Republic of Liberia,” Kenneth Rexroth’s “The Love Poems of Marichiko,” and Muriel Rukeyser’s “The Book of the Dead” to Aaron Kramer’s “Denmark Vesey,” Kathleen Fraser’s “In Commemoration of the Visit of Foreign Commercial Representatives to Japan, 1947,” and Natasha Trethewey’s “Native Ground.” “Denmark Vesey” combines a dramatic narrative of a potential slave revolt with complex musical, metrical, and formal choices that make for a poem that has nothing comparable in American literary history. The integration of African and European history and culture in “Libretto for the Republic of Liberia,” combined with Tolson’s high rhetorical style has no match I know of save perhaps Derek Walcott’s layered account of Caribbean culture and Western imperialism, despite textual affinities with such diverse texts as Eliot’s Waste Land, Pound’s Cantos, and Olson’s Maximus Poems.

When possible, I added a few short poems to one long one, or at least prefaced a longer, more difficult poem with one that might prove more accessible. “Susie Asado” precedes “Patriarchal Poetry.” Mina Loy’s “(There is no Life or Death)” and “O Hell” come before “Songs to Joannes.” Charles Wright’s “Spider Crystal Ascension” and “Clear Night” precede his “Homage to Paul Cezanne.” Even when I try to represent a whole career, however, I am willing to grant space to longer poems—including William Carlos Williams’s “The Descent of Winter,” Theodore Roethke’s “North American Sequence,” Allen Ginsberg’s “Howl,” Gwendolyn Brook’s “Gay Chaps at the Bar,” Denise Levertov’s “Olga Poems,” and Adrienne Rich’s “Twenty-One Love Poems.” With Marianne Moore I opted for two long poems, “The Octopus” and “Marriage,” because their referential divide between nature and culture makes them inescapable companion poems. I believe there are more long poems and poem sequences in this collection than in any other comprehensive anthology.

On the other hand, in a few cases a lone poem is here not to encapsulate a major career but rather to help capture the spirit of a literary movement. Herman Spector’s “Wiseguy Type,” V. J. Jerome’s “A Negro Mother to Her Child,” and Joseph Freeman’s “Our Age Has Caesars” perfectly embody the cultural commitments of 1930s proletarian poetry and thus help make possible the account of that period mentioned above. Welton Smith’s “Malcolm” is one of the most indicative products of the Black Arts Movement. I point this out here lest readers assume I am making larger claims about the contributions these writers have made to our literary history. On the other hand, Arsenius Chaleco’s “Requiem” is here because it is one of the more powerful examples of American Indian elegies to appear over several decades. What it says about his career we can only guess, since it is the only poem by him known to have survived. And Tillie Olsen’s “I Want You Women Up North to Know,” a classic poem about women’s work by a writer widely celebrated for her fiction and nonfiction prose, is a compelling poem reprinted here in part to challenge disciplinary notions about the transitory character of topical poetry. It should also encourage readers to think anew about the kinds of cultural and political work a poem can do, for it is unfortunately just as relevant today as it was decades ago. Indeed, given women’s working conditions in Asia—and the relationship between their exploitation and those in America who buy the clothing they produce—the poem could also be revised to read “I Want You Women in the West to Know.” What kind of difference, we might ask, does poetic language make to a subject like this?

The chronological table of contents is divided between the “modern” and “contemporary” volumes; it divides roughly at 1910 birth dates, but the differentiation is necessarily imperfect. Some careers—both long ones and curtailed ones—notably straddle the divide between modernity and contemporaneity. Muriel Rukeyser began in part as a 1930s poet devoted to labor issues and captured, like so many progressive writers, by the lure of antifascism and the cause of democratic Spain, but she concluded her career decades later by writing key poems speaking for contemporary feminism. Like Rukeyser, Edwin Rolfe began firmly in 1930s culture and politics, but he composed some of our most telling poems against McCarthyism in the early 1950s. As part of an effort to make the two volumes internally coherent, I made a judgment about where the main weight of a poet’s reputation fell, thus assigning some poets born in 1910–1913 to the first volume and some born in 1910 to the second.

In addition to a standard chronological table, we provide a topical table of contents. Some critical topics bridge multiple categories. The long American poetic dialogue about the culturally constructed but powerful subject of race that came to a head in the nineteenth-century Abolitionist movement becomes a major feature of twentieth-century poetry. Poets of white, black, Asian, Native American, Latino, and multiple heritages reflect on that history here, interrogating both whiteness and blackness and producing searing statements to be found perhaps nowhere else in our literature—perhaps nowhere else in our culture.

None of the classifications in the topical table of contents are definitive. And there are many topics not listed. You can also read Marianne Moore, Robert Lowell, Denise Levertov, Mona Van Duyn, Gregory Corso, and Ai about marriage. You can compare poems about Helen of Troy by H.D. and Laura Riding, poems about Cassandra by Robinson Jeffers and Louise Bogan. You can gather together poems by Joseph Freeman, Kenneth Fearing, John Beecher, Joseph Kalar, Edwin Rolfe, Sol Funaroff, Muriel Rukeyser, Genevieve Taggard, and Tillie Olsen to revisit the political 1930s. You can read love poems on the list in the topical table of contents, then unsettle the category by reading Edna St. Vincent Millay’s “Sonnets from an Ungrafted Tree” or Richard Siken’s “A Primer for the Small Weird Loves.” Importantly, poets often appear in more than one category, sometimes even contributing to both experimental and formalist traditions. While polemical claims about what constitutes either an experimental or a formalist poem abound—and certainly play a role in literary history—they did not seem to me to have a place in the groupings here. These classifications are designed to be suggestive, inclusive, and exploratory. They are a starting place for a discussion of these categories. Thus Anthony Hecht’s adaptation of traditional poetic forms shares the paragraph with the new forms Langston Hughes invented.

This effort to be receptive to different kinds of open and closed forms matches the realization that both our personal and our institutional evaluations change over time. Ten years ago I thought Joseph Kalar wrote only one important poem. Now I realize he has more than a score of them. For years I missed hearing the special music of “Denmark Vesey.” Eventually I coedited Kramer’s selected poems. But the material facts of history shift and evolve over time as well. Every literary history and reference work I know dates Native American poetry from the 1960s. Indian texts standing in for poems before then often amounted to transcriptions and adaptations of chants and other oral performances, not infrequently recorded by missionaries or anthropologists. But what every poetry scholar believed, wrote, and taught was not true. Native Americans worked in traditional rhymed and metered forms from the nineteenth century on—but they published them in Indian magazines that never reached the dominant culture. Enough of that stunning history has now been recovered so that I can include the work of six Native American poets who wrote prior to the 1950s. The first three authors in the modern half of the collection are Walt Whitman, Too-qua-stee, and Emily Dickinson. The newly recovered Native American poems in the book also force us to reconceive the role of poetry in Native American life, along with any assumptions we may have about what Indians were reading and thinking about in the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. Two of the poems partly parody widely read poems by white authors, and the poems include references to events elsewhere in the world.

Some of these recovered poems, like Alexander Posey’s “The Fall of the Redskin,” include historical references no longer part of most Americans’ cultural memory and thus benefit from annotation. The most extreme case of this is Tolson’s “Libretto for the Republic of Liberia,” where the poem is fundamentally inaccessible without extensive notes. We are proud to publish “Libretto” in its first fully annotated version and hope it can gain wider readership as a result. Despite occasionally worrying that a footnote might seem to narrow an allusion’s implications, like most text editors I have opted to annotate. It is worth knowing, for example, that Anthony Hecht served in the army and was there when a concentration camp was liberated. That doesn’t diminish the power of his Holocaust poems. Perhaps instead it reminds us both that proximity to horror can increase the necessity of witness and that distance from horror complicates our own commitment. On the other hand, on a few occasions, as with Edwin Rolfe’s “June 19, 1953,” I chose not to annotate the poem, thereby encouraging readers who do not recognize the reference to pause, look it up on the internet, and perhaps ask themselves why they do not already know the answer, why the knowledge has been erased from general cultural awareness.

The arrangement of each poet’s work is most often chronological, but I diverge from chronology when doing so made for a more coherent selection. Thus it would have been pointlessly disruptive to have interrupted a group of rather serious poems by Sharon Olds with her witty “The Pope’s Penis,” so I open her selection with that irreverent poem instead. One decision about how to represent a poet’s work was driven by copyright law. In the case of poems first published in 1922 or earlier, then later revised, we print the earlier version here. That results in recovering earlier and less familiar versions of poems by Amy Lowell, Robert Frost, Marianne Moore, John Crowe Ransom, E. E. Cummings, and Hart Crane. To put matters bluntly, some publishers now charge substantial reprint fees for the post-1922 versions of many poems first published earlier. Staying within budget meant making the strategic choice of opting for the pre-1923 public domain versions of several poems.

On the other hand, some poets responding to the cultural and political climate of the 1960s made public gifts of a few poems either then or in the 1970s by issuing broadsides without copyright notices. That tradition began earlier in the century with poems contributed to the labor movement, but it continued decades later with poems that contributed to the antiwar, feminist, and gay liberation movements. Even poets who copyrighted the majority of their broadsides occasionally selected poems for public domain distribution. In the early part of the century, neither Edwin Markham nor Vachel Lindsay ever copyrighted their broadsides.

The illustrated version of Markham’s “The Man with the Hoe” was first published as an insert in the San Francisco Examiner in 1899. Lindsay distributed his two-panel “Drink for Sale” broadside at a July 29, 1909, anti-saloon lecture in Springfield, Illinois. Decades later, Allen Ginsberg’s “Rain-wet Asphalt Heat, Garbage Curbed Cans Overflowing” would be issued as a “free poem” from Detroit’s Alternative Press, and Robert Bly’s Unicorn Broadside version of “Hearing Gary Snyder Read” would be labeled “may be reproduced without permission.” Such notices underlined the legal status of poems published without copyright notice from 1923 to 1976. “The Form Falls in on Itself” by David Ignatow (1914–1997) was one of two Ignatow broadsides with lettering by Wang Hui-Ming distributed in 1971. The following year Hui-Ming collected a series of his broadside poems by various authors in his book The Land on the Tip of a Hair: Poems in Wood. Hughes’s “Christ in Alabama” was illustrated by his longtime companion Zell Ingram; the illustrated version appeared in Contempo in 1931. Charles Henri Ford’s “Serenade to Leonor” is illustrated with paintings by Leonor Fini. Alan Halsey’s illustrated version of Gary Snyder’s “O Mother Gaia” was issued by Glenn Storhaug at Five Seasons Press. Ginsberg’s “Kraj Majales” was illustrated by Robert LaVigne, his “Moloch” by Lyn Ward. The illustrations to Lindsay’s “Drink for Sale” and “The Virginians Are Coming,” Ginsberg’s “Consulting I Ching Smoking Pot Listening to the Fugs Sing Blake” and Richard Wilbur’s “A Difference” are by the poets themselves. Everson’s “A Canticle to the Waterbirds” has a wood-block version of a heron by Daniel O. Stolpe. Except for “Christ in Alabama,” which is reproduced (in a form restored by the editor) from the copy in the rare books collection at the University of Illinois at Urbana–Champaign, all the illustrated poems come from the editor’s personal collection.

A vast amount of critical commentary and historical background for the poets and many of the poems included here can be found on the website we have been constructing since 1999. Hundreds of poems have individual entries with extensive commentary devoted to them. Titled Modern American Poetry Site (MAPS), it was originally constructed at www.english.uiuc.edu/maps. It is now being reconstructed as a database at:

www.maps.english.illinois.edu

The website’s first incarnation was designed by Matthew Hurt and edited by Cary Nelson and many other scholars. Bart Brinkman has now joined me as overall editor and designer of MAPS. The site is open to all and widely used by hundreds of thousands of poetry readers across the world. It includes scores of new essays published there for the first time, along with unique photo arrays that supplement the commentary on Angel Island, the Great Depression, the Holocaust, World War II, and the subject matter of many other poems. Detailed individual background essays for many of the individuals mentioned in particular poems can be found there as well.

My first appreciation is due Oxford University Press for offering me the opportunity to revise and update the anthology. Sincere thanks is also due the long list of poets, literary agents, and publishers who worked with us to make this edition possible. Special thanks go out to Philip Levine, without whose timely intervention on behalf of the book’s uniquely progressive aims—aims Oxford University Press consistently supported—the project would quite simply have failed.

As part of its review process, Oxford solicited a number of very helpful comments about the first edition. A new set of comments arrived in response to the draft table of contents for this revised edition. My thanks to all those who took the time to offer their suggestions: [ADD NAMES]

CHANGES TO THE SECOND EDITION

As the law requires, we conclude with a brief summary of the changes to the second edition of this anthology. Forty-four named poets are new to the second edition, along with several anonymous poets who carved poems on the walls of Angel Island. We have continued the practice we established over a decade ago of including poets who will be unknown to many readers. If the little-known poets of the first edition are now better known, I expect some of the poets new to this edition will once again represent fresh discoveries for most readers. Perhaps their work will spread to other collections as a result. The first edition was the only anthology to include Edwin Rolfe in over half a century; you can now find his poetry in over twenty collections.

On the other hand, we repeated our earlier decision to omit songs. A full and fair representation of American song would have required another hundred pages. Unable to do the tradition justice, I chose not to do it at all. Are there a few poets who would have a more generous selection if their publishers did not demand such exorbitant reprint fees? To be sure. As I will argue in a separate essay, modern poetry anthologies will soon become financially impossible unless escalating reprint fees are moderated. But overall I believe this anthology more than fulfills its aims. Only one poet has been dropped—because we were unable to reach the holder of rights to his work. A remarkable ninety-one poets have had the selection of their work expanded. Over 350 poems are new to the book. The topical table of contents is a new feature as well. And the sheer fact of increased length has led us to divide the book into two volumes, modern and contemporary, though, as the topical list demonstrates, there are many fruitful comparisons and contrasts to be made between poems in the two volumes and several traditions that run through both halves of the anthology. Here, in a convenient bulleted list, are the highlights of the second edition:

- Topical table of contents.

- New (previously unpublished) translations and an expanded selection of Angel Island poems.

- Previously unpublished poems by Gwendolyn Bennett.

- Expanded sections of illustrated poems: new illustrated poems by Vachel Lindsay, Charles Henri Ford, Allen Ginsberg, William Everson, David Ignatow, W.S. Merwin, Gary Snyder, and Richard Wilbur.
New special section: wartime poems by William Butler Yeats, Edward Thomas, Siegfried Sassoon, Isaac Rosenberg, and Wilfred Owen to compare with their American counterparts.

The author wishes to thank the following reviewers who provided feedback for this book:

Dorothy Barresi, California State University–Northridge; Anthony Cuda, University of North Carolina–Greensboro; Joseph Duemer, Clarkson University; Cathy E. Fagan, Nassau Community College; Louis Gallo, Radford University; Siân Griffiths, Piedmont College; Christine Hume, Eastern Michigan University; Ruth Jennison, University of Massachusetts; Linda A. Kinnahan, Duquesne University; Elizabeth Majerus, University of Illinois Laboratory High School; Brian McHale, Ohio State University; Peter Nicholls, New York University; Rhonda Pettit, University of Cincinnati; Paul Robichaud, Albertus Magnus College; Catherine A. Rogers, Savannah State University; Jennifer Ryan, Buffalo State College; Eric Murphy Selinger, DePaul University; Heather H. Thomas, Kutztown University of Pennsylvania.